16 TRAFFIC DEATHS IN MAINE LAST MONTH

With 16 people killed in 12 traffic accidents last month, Maine has experienced its second highest January death record. This follows a record breaking December and establishes an all-time high of 42 killed during these two winter months.

Corresponding months last winter show 25 fatalities and two years ago there were only 18 highway deaths.

The causes of January's fatalities were as follows: 5 killed in three sliding accidents, 5 killed by drinking drivers in 2 accidents, 2 killed by railroad trains, 1 killed by speeding, 1 killed as the result of illegal parking and 1 killed when driver fell asleep and ran off the road.

The increase in accidents over last year is largely due to winter driving conditions. Of the hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of damage caused so far this year, much is due to the fact that drivers still do not make allowances for slippery roads. They just don't seem to realize that cars must not only be driven slower but more distance be allowed between vehicles for stopping on icy roads.

The brightest spot in our accident picture to date is that we have yet to list our first pedestrian fatality of the year. The time, however, is not too far distant and we should take warning and make certain that it will not be us.

With several weeks of hazardous road conditions still ahead of us, drivers should exercise good judgment and not drive too fast for conditions.

This winter has resulted in an alarming number of railroad crossing accidents. These have been due mostly to indifference and inattention on the part of drivers. All railroad crossing approaches have warning signs erected and they must be heeded because it is well to remember that the train always has the right of way. —Lt. John De Winter, Director, Division of Traffic and Safety, Maine State Police.

Players Ready Mystery Presentation March 1-2

BETHEL PLAYERS CAST in "Drums of Death" to be presented at William Bingham Gymnasium on Thursday and Friday evenings, March 1 and 2. In the front row are: Mrs. Richard Waldron, Mrs. John Robinson, Mrs. Richard Davis, Mrs. Freeland Clark, and Mrs. Josephine Whitman; back row—Addison Saunders, Francis Noyes, Irving Cummings, and John Robinson. Mrs. Paul Carter was absent.

"Drums of Death," the play currently rehearsed by the Bethel Players for a March 1 and 2 performance, is exceptionally well designed to keep its audience midway between a belly laugh and a mild paroxysm of fear. Two European powers plot cold calculating intrigue in and around a massive seacoast mansion while four female "relatives" of its owner shriek, rant and tumble around blindly through the maze of hidden doors and leering servants. The antagonists remain unknown until a suitable time has been allowed those in the audience with average perspicacity to unfathom the mystery; other characters in their innocence, audacity, or stupidity, tumble around in a fashion that cannot but amuse all but the most tense of the who-dunnits. The cast brings forth many familiar to local residents and patrons of the Bethel stage, Elsie Waldron, Red Noyes, Pat Carter, Ad Saunders, together with some new newcomers to the stage and in some cases to Bethel, Marguerite Clark, Rita Davis, Blackie Cummings, Josephine Whitman, John and Adele Robinson. The play is under the direction of veteran Players June Greig and Alma Young. Technicians include backstage-stagers Roland Glines, Charles Freeman, Leland Brown, Gertrude Hutchins and Esther Brown.

The scene is set in a run-down mansion acquired as a hide-away by an old man who has spent the better part of his remarkable life in the jungles of Africa, and to which he has come bearing an idol of a warlike tribe; this idol becomes the object of a mysterious search involving agents of interested colonial powers in Europe, and the safety of which hangs in the balance throughout the play. A sincere yet entirely stupid local sheriff aids the women relatives in practically jeopardizing everybody and everything involved in the action. Many numerous incidents follow their arrival on the stage. The audience may expect, however, to occasionally arrive at the edge of their seats as an assortment of diabolical characters sink about their deadly and calculating business. Tickets for the play will be on sale at Boserman's Pharmacy.

Bridgton, 65-45, in Finale

Gould Academy finished its final week with two smashing victories. After decisively beating the Franklin County Champions, Jay, 61-40, on Tuesday, they came through again Friday to pile up their high-point score of the season against Bridgton, 65-45. "Hoby" Lowell's 25 points was his best production of the year as he brought his season's total to 227. Agnese and Ellwell followed with 12 and 16. It was Agnese's three baskets in the third period that broke up the game and sent Gould out front with a comfortable lead. Coach Anderson used 10 men in the game and 9 of the 10 entered the scoring column.

Lepold and Hill with 14 and 13 points each, scored over half of the Bridgton points, Robbins, Bridgton center, usually a high scorer, was held in check with only 5 points to his credit.

This final victory clinched third place for the Huskies. The winner of the Mexico-Wilton game will share this position with both teams finishing with 7 wins and 7 defeats in the Sun-Journal League.

"Hoby" Lowell, Wayne Bennett, Dick Douglass and Jim Durham, played their last game for the Academy. The other six men: Johnson, Ellwell, Biden, Agnese, Bartlett, and Murphy will all be back to form the nucleus of the team of '52.

This year's aggregation has shown tremendous improvement over the season and right now is one of the better teams in the league.

Two young children, Ralph, 4, and Billy, 2, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Butler, of Bethel, were burned to death Friday, when a fire started by a kiddy oil heater destroyed their home. Two other brothers were saved. The Butler home was only eight miles from Caribou, where four children perished, Jan. 11, in a similar tragedy.

Mrs. Beverly Bixby, mother of four children who were burned to death in January when fire destroyed their home, was injured Saturday when a parked car, in which she was sitting, was hit by another car driven by Asa Timberlake of Livermore Falls left Route 2 on the Bethel-Mexico road, skidded 75 feet, traveled across a field 105 feet, hitting two parked cars. Mrs. Bixby was taken to Hamden Community Hospital, but was later released after being treated for shock.

Icy road conditions were blamed for two other accidents in the same area Saturday. Glenn Holman, of Rumford, whose car left the road on Saturday and John Howard of Rumford whose car skidded and skinned down a light pole causing much damage to the car, the same day.

Pot Lynwood Jackson of Oxford, father of two sons killed in a auto accident recently, received a telegram Tuesday from Ben Margaret Chase Smith stating he was to receive his discharge from the army. The State VFW has been interceding in his behalf, either for a discharge or to keep him from leaving to return to Korea. His name will be up on Feb. 23.

FOUR DEAD AFTER WOOD FLOUR BLAST IN SOUTH PARIS MILL

Four men have died from injuries received Friday night in an explosion in the three-story wood flour plant of the Wilner Wood Heel Co. at South Paris. The mill was destroyed by the fire which followed, with a loss estimated at $250,000. Usually operating with seven men, only five were working, that night, all of whom were taken to the Central Maine General Hospital, Lewiston, suffering third degree burns. Some of the men were blown several hundred feet by the explosion which rocked the twin-towns.

The dead are Richard Beane, 20, of Buckfield, who died Saturday morning; Gordon Grover, 34, of Oxbell, and George Suomela, 35, of Norway Lake. Grover and Suomela died Saturday night; and Arthur Enman, 35, of Norway, whose death occurred Wednesday. Walter Holmlund, 24, of Paris Hill, remains in serious condition at the hospital.

The nearby wood heel mill and kilns drying large quantities of lumber were not damaged.

The wood flour mill was said to be one of the finest in the world its product being used in the manufacture of plastics and floor coverings. Plans are already in progress for rebuilding the plant in one story form.

ROY SCOT NEWS

Much progress is being made in the decoration of the Scout room. Volunteer groups of local men have worked three nights recent and Thursday night a group of mothers from Oxford are planning to install draper they have made.

Considerable furniture has been donated the past week so that we have nearly enough chairs and benches for the average meeting. We especially need an asbestos mat for under the stove as well as about 40 square feet of asbestos wall board to protect the new paper and paint near the stove.

The theme of the meeting this week will be Spring Camping. Boys should try to bring their knapsacks properly packed for an overnight camping trip with all accessories food.

Good Education Gets Good Results

When the school authorities and business men of Youngstown, Ohio sat down together three and a half years ago to devise a special educational program for the area's school children, they knew they were tackling a real problem. One hundred high school seniors had been questioned and the results showed serious gaps in their knowledge. They were poorly informed about the history, resources and opportunities of their community and they had a hazy notion of what makes the American way of life tick.

With assistance and counsel from the business and industrial leaders, the educators developed a program which is now producing thrilling results in the elementary and high schools. The program stresses study in three fields: history, geography and civics. It is a most highly individualized and well planned program. It is a most highly individualized and well planned program. It is a most highly individualized and well planned program.

The value of this program is being measured by the fact that the students are now showing a marked improvement in their knowledge of the community and the American way of life. Dale Carnegie

Author of "HOW TO WIN FRIENDS and INFLUENCE PEOPLE"

Show Interest in Others

DURING THE WINTER of 1937-38, Donald A. Dahlberg, Omaha, Nebraska, was working as a room clerk at the swank Nauticus Hotel, Miami Beach, Florida.

This could have been a monotonous job, even a boring one to some people, but not to Donald Dahlberg. He believed that whether a job was interesting was entirely the responsibility of the one who held it down. So he became interested in the guests of the hotel. What a lot of nice people there were in the world! And how many of them came right there to his hotel.

Carnegie

When they came to the desk to inquire for their mail or to get their room keys, he often exchanged conversation with them. Frequently he was able to give bits of information that were very welcome to those guests. If the guest displayed a desire to converse, he let him do the talking. And he got a lot of information he welcomed.

They had a good season that winter; made a lot of money. But since everything comes to an end, so did the good season.

Now Don must look around for another post. He had made some attempts at getting located but so far nothing had materialized. He wasn't worried — exactly — but he did want to get settled in his mind.

Then just two days before the season ended, the boss, Mr. Fred Abel, called him into his office. "Don," he began, "what are your plans for the spring and summer season? Have you made a connection with a northern hotel?"

When Don told him that nothing had turned up as yet, Mr. Abel continued, "I've just had a call from a Mrs. Wright at Pirates Cove, Florida. She was a guest here earlier in the season. Remember her?"

Don said he did recall her. "She liked your manner," said Mr. Abel, "and she noticed that you took a genuine interest in all the guests, and that you didn't overdo it. She'd like to have you down at Pirates Cove to manage her fishing camp."

Well, Don lost no time in making contact with Mrs. Wright and he says that he never spent a more delightful season himself. He not only got in a lot of fishing but he met a lot of interesting people, among them Gene Tunney, Ernest Hemingway and the painter Lynn Buge Hunt.

He continues to show genuine interest in others. As who wouldn't?

THIS WEEK IN Washington

THE RINGING CHALLENGE of General of the Armies Dwight D. Eisenhower and the effects of the price and wage control orders were the highlights of the busy week in Washington.

General Eisenhower confounded some of the detractors to the greatness of the country in the defense of North Atlantic nations when he thoughtfully and ably heartily supported the administration program and declared that the preservation of free America requires our participation in the defense of western Europe, and he refused to be placed in a straight jacket of precluding just what that defense requires. He made what was necessary, but limited, only in the words of his own words, "I am not a politician, I am a soldier, and I am a soldier of the American people."

Painting to a rejuvenation of the fighting spirit in the nations of Europe, General Eisenhower urged Americans to "match the courage and self-sacrifice of the rugged, freedom-loving members of Washington's army at Valley Forge" and said, "If each of us proves himself worthy of his countrymen fighting and dying in Korea, then success is sure, a glorious success that will bring us security, confidence and tranquility."

General Eisenhower, however, said each American must do his part. "We cannot delay, nationally or individually, while we suspiciously scrutinize the sacrifice made by our neighbor, and through a weaving logic, seek some way to avoid our own duties."

"If we Americans set the lead we will preserve and be worthy of our own past. Our children will dwell in peace. They will dwell in freedom. They will read the history of this decade with ringing pride and, from their knowledge with this generation, they will inherit more than can be expressed in millions of acres or in world acclaim."

Michael V. D'Salle, director of the office of price stabilization, is running the gamut of criticism, heeding and just plain every day gunning as a result of the general price freeze he ordered on January 30, with prices at the highest point in the nation's history. Indicative of how this criticism rolls off the Toledo mayor, however, is a story he tells concerning an irate woman who spent 20 minutes berating him in a long distance call from Pittsburgh.

"It was just like talking to my wife," D'Salle quipped, "for all I could say was 'yes, yes, yes, yes, until she finished.'"

However, D'Salle's price freeze, according to the economists and to D'Salle himself has logic behind it. For instance, some farm leaders declared that farmers would not produce if they were placed under price controls. Some said that industry would not produce either without incentives. Said D'Salle, however:

"I cannot subscribe to the theory or the view that controls will slow down production. We freeze prices at the highest point in history and if people need some incentive besides the incentive of self-preservation, and the preservation of the nation, they certainly have the incentive of high prices under our order."

D'Salle said he saw in the near future, some astounding results in price reductions when final equitable and tailored regulations for each industry are completed. We will have these regulations in a pre-Korean base and attempt to fix margins at that date and see what happens to prices. He pointed out that meat is upmost in the minds of people, since it was meat that broke the back of price controls under OPA. He said there may be some price increases before there are roll backs, likening the fixing of the price freeze to a speeding automobile when brakes are applied.

"We saw a red light. We applied the brakes. That does not mean we automatically came to a halt. But we have slowed it down and we may have some time lag before we do come to a halt and achieve our objective, just as a car speeding at 60 miles an hour does not automatically halt when brakes are applied, but travels on some distance before coming to a full stop."

The LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

Academic Freedom, that is what they are demanding — and no exception in our big universities. Sounds like deep water you are delving into, says Henry — and when or where did you ever see the trials of a college? Don't be too sure or prudent, I say, but I refuse to answer it might involve my rights under the constitution. That quieted him but I will say and admit I been delving into some fleshy things on and the professors making the biggest noise don't impress

By LYTLE HULL

MUCH HAS BEEN WRITTEN and said regarding the recent branding of Communist China as an aggressor, but only time and the course now to be followed will demonstrate whether or not another disaster has been done to the cause of democracy.

We can say in favor of the resolution that it has submerged, at least for the present, the Indian-Asian proposal for a joint meeting of seven nations to debate the far eastern situation. This debate was to cover withdrawal of troops from Korea, the Formosan situation, and the seating of the Red Chinese government in the United Nations.

The nations to discuss these questions were the U.S.A., France, Great Britain, Russia, India, Egypt and Red China.

Now these "joint meetings," which start out as debating societies, usually end up as makers of policy. They are reminiscent of "Presidential fact finding boards" which seem always to find facts in favor of the unions but never of the industries. The findings of these boards are often adopted by the unions as laws and enforced by the threat of strikes.

If this seven nation meeting should decide that we withdraw from Korea, allow the Reds to attack Formosa, and grant China a seat in the U.N., there is a strong possibility that the U.N. might ratify these "findings," and that the state department might feel "obligated" to back the U.N. decisions. Our administration's far Eastern policy is as devious as a maze and as dependable as dynamite.

Now, how do you think, dear reader, the votes would go in this proposed seven nation meeting? France would oppose Russia and Red China. Great Britain would probably favor withdrawal from Korea of U.N. troops, abandoning Formosa to Red conquest, and waiting Red China. Our vote wouldn't be necessary.

We would be madmen even to countenance such a meeting, and Mr. Nehru's choice of conferees is an insult to anyone's intelligence.

Golden hours of vision come to us in this present life, when we are at our best, and our faculties work together in harmony.

Charles Fletcher Cole

Too many professors want to let every brother teach anything such brothers seem fit to teach. No holds barred if it is socialistic it is neither here nor there. Academic Freedom, they call it. That is where I go to the mat with intellectualism.

Throughout land — in many schools — academic freedom is working against our old fashioned Plymouth Rock style freedom and towards crippling socialism which leads next and sure as there are little apples to communism.

A WORD TO WORK WITH

Today's word is expression. This word means the act or power of representing something, and comes into present speech through the Latin language. It is closely associated with thoughts of reflection and manifestation. Roget in his Thesaurus gives demonstration as a synonym.

Truth, to be truth, must be expressed.

It is good to consider, (to ponder), truth in man as the expression of God. Knowing himself as the offspring of God, man cannot be depressed, repressed, oppressed, or suppressed; he is conscious of expression only.

"In the beginning was the Word; and the Word was with God; and the Word was God," says John 1:1. Here is expression.

This quick loaf bread, well flavored with apples, cheese and nuts, is as easy to make as it is to eat. Serve it with butter or margarine for snacks, as breakfast sweet bread, or with luncheon salads.

If you work outside your home, and still like to give your family special home baked treats, depend upon quick breads to make meals extra good.

Loaf breads take no longer than a cake to mix, and they can be served for many occasions. Finger sandwiches made with loaf breads perk up a salad assortment and may also serve as simple dessert. Loaf bread sandwiches are good travelers in lunchboxes, too.

One of the most delicious of the loaf bread family, Apple Nut Bread, combines the flavors of freshly chopped apple, grated American cheese and chopped nuts. These foods also add their food values to those of enriched flour to make an important contribution to family health. All enriched breads rank high in essential B-vitamins and food iron. Apple Nut Bread is a delightful way to get your vitamins!

This sandwich bread is good the day that it is baked, though it slices better the following day. Jellies and jams, peanut butter and cream cheese are other good spreads for slices of this sandwich loaf.

SUCCESSFUL PARENTHOOD

MR. CATHERINE CONRAD EDWARDS
Associate Editor
Parents Magazine

WHEN FAMILIES were larger, the older children made pets of the youngest and thereby richly filled the need growing youngsters have to love some live thing in their own ecstatic fashion. But with today's small families animal pets are an emotional substitute which shouldn't be denied children, no matter how inconvenient a pet in the house may be.

For however much a child loves his parents there is always a sense of seeking, of yearning about his relationship with an adult. The parent isn't always around and often the absence, perfectly normal from the adult point of view, seem to the child a lack of interest in him. It is also necessary for the adult to instruct and sometimes reprove the child. This is as it should be, but this role of mentor does raise doubts in the child's mind at times as to whether he is really loved.

But a puppy is always around and loves the child just as passionately in the morning when mother is too busy getting the older members of the family off for the day to show much affection to the youngest, and the puppy's answer is just as enthusiastic the tenth time the child speaks to him as it was the first—a boundless response which human parents couldn't possibly equal. And, of course, a pet never sits in judgment on a youngster—clean or dirty, well-behaved or disobedient, a pet's adoration remains constant.

Parents have been told often about the lessons a child learns from having pets—and then later wondered if there weren't some easier way to teach them. For example, the sense of responsibility which feeding a pet is supposed to inculcate often means added responsibility for the parent in seeing that the child carries out this chore, since you can't let an animal starve. But patient reminders are needed for most of a child's learning experiences, so don't be discouraged if his dog doesn't make a man out of Junior over night.

Actually, before seven a child is too young to feel any responsibility toward the comfort of another living thing. Besides, a young child looks upon an animal as possessing the understanding of human beings and so must be able to fend for himself. Perfectly normal children can be cruel to pets because they may consider their kitten or puppy a rival for their parents' affection. But if parents use care and caution in introducing a pet into the child's life, and keep an eye on them, child and pet will both benefit by the relationship.

The very reasons some parents give for not letting their children have pets are often arguments on the other side. The child becomes attached to the pet and it dies and then you have an unhappy child, they say. But this sort of timid, holding back from experience is not the attitude with which you want children to face life. Or they say that a pet, especially a dog, is too noisy and too troublesome for a young child. But anyone who has ever tried to keep up with a child's energy is grateful to an active dog for wearing off some of it!

"EASY DOES IT"

GROUND ALLSPICE and chopped parsley mixed with ground lamb give a tangy taste to this bland meat. If desired, the patties may be marinated in lemon juice or salad oil for one-half an hour before cooking.

Heat your leftover sliced beef in diluted or skimmed tomato sauce to which a bit of curry has been added. This is attractive over mounded, mashed potatoes or rice. Crisp, cooked bacon shivers added to your French dressing give a novel flavor to vegetable or citrus fruit salads. You may also add a bit of condensed tomato soup to it if you like the richness.

An unforgettable filling for popovers or hot biscuits is creamed ham and a garnish of green asparagus tips. Both may be leftovers from Sunday dinner.

Add flavor to meat by placing strips of bacon at the bottom of the pan. You'll also find it helps prevent it from sticking.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK
Grapefruit Flaw
(Serves 6)
2 grapefruit, sectioned
3 cups shredded red or white cabbage
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon celery seed
Cut peel off grapefruit, deep enough to remove white membrane. Then cut slices from top and bottom. Cut along sides of each dividing membrane from outside to middle of core. Remove, section by section, and set on salad greens. Combine remaining ingredients and pile in center of fruit.

Quick and easy salad here that's guaranteed to make a hit includes fresh peas teamed with cheese-stuffed dates on a bed of salad greens. Use a French or sauced cream dressing.

For whole egg or butter cakes that are to be eaten shortly after they're baked, you'll find an easy trick can be made by beating egg whites with raspberry or currant jelly.

Rich sandwich filling that's nourishing too, includes chopped ripe olives and chopped walnuts with enough mayonnaise to moisten. White or whole wheat are good choices for the bread.

A WORD TO WORK WITH

Today's word is expression. This word means the act or power of representing something, and comes into present speech through the Latin language. It is closely associated with thoughts of reflection and manifestation. Roget in his Thesaurus gives demonstration as a synonym.

Truth, to be truth, must be expressed.

It is good to consider, (to ponder), truth in man as the expression of God. Knowing himself as the offspring of God, man cannot be depressed, repressed, oppressed, or suppressed; he is conscious of expression only.

"In the beginning was the Word; and the Word was with God; and the Word was God," says John 1:1. Here is expression.

The Citizen

Nobody's Business

Bethel voters will note in the warrant published this week on page seven that an article has been added since the annual report was printed. This is numbered 43. "To see what action the town will take for regulating and controlling the business of hawking and peddling of goods, wares and merchandise at retail within the limits of the town, for the issuing by the municipal officers of municipal licenses and the imposing of license fees therefor."

Apparently if adopted this will make one more license for the milk men, also for bakery route drivers, and farmers with butter, potatoes or apples.

Interest in Article 43 may hold the crowd until the latter part of the meeting.

Remember petitions for names of candidates to appear on the town meeting ballot must be in the clerk's hands by Saturday.

CIVIL DEFENSE

Volunteer Army of Civilians Will Guard Us From Disaster

By Walter A. Shead

(This is the first of five articles on civil defense.)

A TALL, LEAN, SQUARE-JAWED, broad-shouldered man sits in a temporary office in one of the many converted government buildings, a short two blocks from the White House. His name is destined to become well known to millions of Americans. He is Millard F. Caldwell, former governor of Florida, who has been handed the tremendous responsibility of the nation's civil defense and who will head up a volunteer army of civilian Americans which will total some 20,000,000 men and women in every state of the union.

His immediate job is to weld together a small force of approximately 2,000 paid employees, approximately 1,000 of whom will be administrative workers here in Washington, the rest field officers in various states and strategic areas.

At the same time, he must start from scratch to train these people who will in turn train the 20-million man army in an entirely new field of civilian defense warfare—a type warfare new to civilization in which the mode of defense is largely over pioneer and untrod paths, and in which men, women and children, untrained, without knowledge of possible defense—may be helplessly slaughtered by the thousands.

Governor Caldwell must come up with the answers to these questions: What can I do to protect myself and my neighbors if an atomic bomb is dropped in or near my home? What about a hydrogen bomb? What protection do I have in case a bacteriological bomb or balloon is loosed in my community? What defense is there against radiological warfare? Or the dropping of insect gas or plant disease to destroy crops and animals?

Governor Caldwell believes that it is entirely within the realm of possibility that the American people face one or all of these terrible methods of modern warfare if the nation should get into a full-scale war with Russia. The extent would depend only upon the enemy's ability to pierce our air defenses, our sea defenses and just how far the Russian's were determined to go.

So a well-trained civilian army is as essential to the nation's defense as a well-trained and equipped military force; is just as essential, and possibly more so in saving the lives of American civilians and, without civilian aid, our production our military cannot move.

There are defenses to atomic bombs, to attacks against health and crops and animals.

The help of every organization in the nation and of every individual will be called not only to join in the civil defense, but to help make the masses of the people bomb-conscious, to prevent fear and hysteria so that a major catastrophe may be averted.

The government has been for months making detailed studies of the bombing of European cities in World War II, of the effects of the atomic bombs at Nagasaki and Hiroshima. They have worked out pattern and effects and defenses.

The public health service and the American Red Cross have worked out detailed plans for health protection. The bureau of animal husbandry and the bureau of plant industry of the department of agriculture have a plan of action for defense against release of gases, pests and plant disease aimed at animal and crop destruction.
